- There is a fundamental difference between science and art . The creative artist deals with the solitary side of human life, where each individual works out his unique vision. In regard to scientific inventions, we tell that they could be replaced. That American devised that atom bomb is an accident, Britain, Russia, Germany or even Japan could have done it. If Columbus had not lived, America would have still been discovered. If Kalidas had not lived, there would have been no 'Abhigyan Shakuntal', without Shakespeare there would have been no 'Hamlet'. These geniuses took up themes from earlier literature and impregnated them with their own intensity. There are institutes for scientific research but we can not have institutes for training poets and prophets.
