Trees are of importance not only to man, but also to other animals and birds. The branches give shelter to all-human beings, birds and animals. Forests protect our environment and give us rain, wood and other useful things for survival. We respect trees for their values and usefulness. They give us wood for building doors, windows and furniture in the house. In ancient times, the wood was the chief source of fuel and weapon. People used wood for getting fire as well as protecting themselves from dangers. They made boat and anchor to cross the river and do business in different places. In ancient times, our saints built their ashrams amidst forest and depended on fruits and flowers collected from forests to survive and meditate. The disciples of these Saints were educated to develop a close relationship with trees, birds and animals in the forest and enjoy their beauty. We, in modern times, do not have this close contact with trees and Nature.
