Venus, the planet where the conditions are probably similar to those we know upon earth. Venus is almost as large as the earth. It has a day of almost equal length and revolves round the sun at a distance of 67,000,000 miles in 224 days. It has been found that Venus has a very thick, cloudy atmosphere. Such an atmosphere would soften the sun's heat, and the days on Venus may not be very much hotter than our own. Since there are clouds on Venus, it has seas and oceans as the earth has. Indeed, of all the planets, Venus is the one we should choose if we make up our minds to fly to another world.
